Arranged as an outline and index, this presents information on college and vocational training education open to southern Negro students. A section on going to college attempts to answer basic questions about college admission. College entrance requirements, tests, sample applications, and terms used in college catalogs are explained. A section on financial aid comprises the major part of the booklet. Scholarship, fellowship, and loan sources are cited. A guide to colleges lists some of the colleges outside of the southern Negro students immediate locale. General scholarship programs set up especially for Negro students are included. A section on career information gives names and addresses of organizations which distribute career information. Vocational and technical schools are discussed. A summer opportunities section lists work and travel projects for high school and college students. A bibliography lists additional publications about financial aid and other sources of information on attending colleges. (AF)

PREFACE

Today we live in a period of great change. Change is all around us, and its effects are widespread. Probably the greatest change has been the expanding technology of this modern age. As a result, the world is far more complex. Things are not done as they were done just ten or fifteen years ago.

Technology is causing major social changes and is creating new opportunities, but at the same time it is requiring a higher level of individual training and education. The time is passing when a high school education will be all the training that is necessary for persons entering into skilled and professional job positions.

Now a college education or advanced training of some kind has more than anything else become a "key" to a successful life. The importance of advanced education has never been greater than it is today. This is particularly true if our society is to meet its need for skilled manpower and enlightened leadership. But aside from these factors, you should also recognize that a college education will most likely:

* double your earning capacity
* allow you to make a greater contribution to society, and
* enrich your personal life.

As a student you should begin to plan for college while in high school. During this time you should take a realistic look at your educational goals, and begin making sound plans to reach these goals.

This guide was created to help you take the greatest advantage of the many opportunities open to students planning to go to college. The information contained in the following pages will provide valuable assistance to you in formulating your plans. With this information in your hands, the editors of this guide wish you the best of luck in planning your educational future.

INTRODUCTION

College Opportunities For Southern Negro Students originated as a project of The University of North Carolina YM-YWCA Human Relations Committee. The Committee has now established the Scholarship Information Centre which is serving as a clearing house for general educational information.

In January, 1966, the Centre published the first edition of the booklet entitled Financial Aid for Southern Negro Students. This booklet was distributed to key points throughout the South in an effort to reach as many students as possible and to provide them with basic information about college opportunities. Due to the favorable response received, a second printing of the first edition was necessary.

The Southern Regional Council, Inc. and the Fund for the Advancement of Education of the Ford Foundation, in response to requests from the Scholarship Information Centre, granted funds for the publication of this second edition. This provided an opportunity to expand and bring up-to-date the information offered in the first edition.

We believe that this guide may prove to be of assistance to high school guidance counselors, community leaders, and any other individuals who may be interested in helping students to realize their true potentials.

This booklet is designed as a guide to some of the many educational opportunities available today to Southern Negro students. It is composed of several sections.

The section "Going to College" is directed toward answering some of the basic questions about admission to college. It provides basic information on college entrance requirements, tests, sample applications, and some terms used in college catalogues.

The sections on "financial aid" comprise the main part of the booklet. Here are listed some of the many scholarship, fellowship, and loan sources which may be used to finance an education. These sources have been selected by SIC in the belief that they offer a realistic possibility of attainment.

The "Guide to Colleges" section is designed to acquaint a student with some of the good colleges which may be outside of his local or state boundary. We have listed general scholarship programs which are set up especially for Negro students by some of these colleges. It is intended that this section will serve to broaden a student's horizon when considering the choice of a college. It is a lead to begin your search for the right college for your particular talents and interest.

The "Career Information" section lists the names and addresses of organizations which distribute information about careers. Although a college education is one desirable method of preparing for a career, vocational and technical schools are a more direct means of getting into some skilled occupations. This section is intended to help a student be more informed about his vocational objective.

The "Summer Opportunities" section of the booklet lists for students some worthwhile work and travel projects for high school and college students. Too many students are completely unaware of any of the meaningful ways in which they may spend their summer while at the same time helping themselves.

The "Bibliography" lists additional publications about financial aid as well as other valuable information on attending college.

The final section of the booklet is the "Index." It contains cross references for much of the information listed in the guide.

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

The editors wish to acknowledge here the people who have put forth the effort necessary to make this booklet a reality. Without the time consuming dedication of all the people involved, this booklet would still be in the planning stages. Below is a listing of some of the people who have spent many hours in the research and compiling of this guide.

Joyce Watkins (Scholarship Information Center, Co-Chairman), Betsy Price (Human Relations Committee, Co-Chairman), John Schoo (Human Relations Committee, Co-Chairman), Brenda Bethel (Former Human Relations Committee, Co-Chairman), Robert Arndt (Assistant to Editors, 1965-66), Tim Balch, Ike Battle, Ann Beasley, Jean Bright, Alicine Chapin (Smith College, Northampton, Mass.), Eric Clay, Phil Clay, Rosalind Corbett (Bennett College, Greensboro, N. C.), Nini Daniell, Joan Davis, LaSandra Dicks (Bennett College, Greensboro, N. C.), Jane Dyer, Jonathan Gibson (YMCA President), Barbara Gunn, Cynthia Hamrick, Waynette Lichty (Distribution Chairman), Jim Medford (Former YMCA President), Dr. Peter Nemenyi (UNC Dept. of Statistics), Peggy Paul (YWCA President), Anna Reed, Paul Scott, Fumiyo Tao, Betty Ellen Thompson, Ed Williams, Chapel Hill Y Teens, Winston Dorm, Education Committee of the NAACP

Special thanks are in order for Mrs. Dorothy Meyer for her excellent job of typing. Special thanks are also in order for Miss Betty Cheek (UNC, Greensboro), whose artistic montage and drawings supplement the commentary. Our deepest gratitude is extended to Mr. Norman Gustaveson, the YMCA Staff Advisor, whose inspiration, direction, and never-ending stamena have aided in both the preparation and printing of this booklet. Final thanks are given to Mrs. Pat Gustaveson for her work, and for allowing her husband to give us so much of his time.

Going To College!

It Can Be Done!

Education beyond high school is a goal you can reach:

There are many kinds of schools for further education:

- junior and community colleges
- colleges
- universities
- technical institutes.

Today you can find educational and training programs to prepare you for any kind of profession or career.

Begin planning in high school for MORE education after you graduate.

Evaluate your interests. What would you like to do?

Evaluate your talents. What are you best able to do?

Do Not Let These Obstacles Stand In Your Way:

Lack of money: find out about many kinds of financial resources available for further education.

Poor grades; poor educational background: find out about special programs to help you improve your educational skills (tutorial projects, Upward Bound program, etc.); find out how you can start now to improve your grades by improving your reading and writing skills (special summer school courses, speed reading courses, etc.).

Lack of information: find out how and where to get more information about colleges, other educational opportunities and sources of financial aid for further education.

Opportunities are waiting: begin now to help make them come true.

The following suggestions will assist you in preparing for college.

Steps To Take In Preparing For Admission To College:

1. Decide whether you have the interest and ability to go to college.
2. Decide what interests you and what kind of education you should have to do what you would like to do.
3. Talk with your high school guidance counselor and teachers; also talk with community leaders who have been to college.
4. Be sure to take all of the college entrance tests that are offered in your high school. If college entrance examination information is not available in your high school, ask your principal or guidance counselor to get it for you. See section on College Entrance Tests.
5. Write for information. It only takes a 5¢ stamp to receive valuable information on colleges, sources of financial aid, careers, and how to prepare yourself for further education. We have tried throughout this guide to list as many of the key sources of information as possible.

We particularly recommend these sources:

(a) Colleges themselves

Many colleges are listed in this guide. Further listings may be found in The New American Guide to Colleges by Gene R. Howes, published by the New American Library (956), P. O. Box 2310, Grand Central Station, New York, N. Y. 10017. Select colleges you would like to receive information about and write to:

Director of Admissions
Name of College
City, State, (Zip Code, if known)

Ask them to send you a college catalog, application forms, and financial aid information.

(b) Specific scholarship and financial aid programs

The main sections of this guide list some of the major organizations that offer financial assistance.

(c) U. S. Government

Write:

Office of Education
U. S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare
Washington, D. C. 20202

Ask them for the small brochure Get Ready for College and Go, (Publication #0-798-005 - free).
Also other valuable information on careers, government loan programs and scholarships.

(d) State education departments

Many state education departments publish excellent guides of colleges and scholarship programs.

Write:

(your state) Dept. of Education
Your state capital

(e) National Scholarship Service and Fund for Negro Students

You should become acquainted with the servies of NSSFNS in your sophomore or junior year. They match students with colleges and try to arrange for scholarship aid.

Write:

National Scholarship Service and Fund for Negro Students
6 East 82nd Street
New York, N. Y. 10028

(f) See Bibliography for further listings of places to write for information.

6. Study college catalogues. Read carefully the college catalogues of schools you are interested in attending. Acquaint yourself with entrance requirements, costs, courses offered and deadlines for applying for financial aid and admission.

7. Visit nearby colleges and universities. Write a note to the admissions director of the college you plan to visit. He or someone on his staff will be happy to talk with you and suggest places to visit on campus.

8. Make your own list of schools you would like to attend. Narrow your selection of schools to six or seven. Do not limit your selection to just local or regional schools. If possible, think about schools in the north, mid-west or far west.

9. Make a list of important deadlines. Make a list of all the things you must do to apply for college. Note deadlines on many of the things you must do. Check college catalogue for dates for many of these items. For instance:

College Entrance Tests
College application for admission
College application for financial assistance
Parents Confidential Statement
Particular Scholarship or loan programs (separate from college)
Registration acceptance fees
New Student Orientation Day

10. Letters of recommendation. Some colleges require letters of recommendation as part of their admissions process. Think about teachers and community leaders who know you and would be able to write a letter of recommendation for you. Ask them early - be sure to provide them with necessary addresses. Get the very best recommendation you can.

11. Work out "form" statement for college applications. Most applications ask for a brief autobiographical statement. what your vocational plans are; what you have done in high school, etc.

    Work out a clear and honest statement that you can use on many different applications.

12. Fill out College Admission Application. See sample on page 7
    Most colleges charge a $10.00 or $15.00 fee for processing your application. For students who cannot afford this, many schools will drop this charge.

    Practice filling out college applications

13. Fill out College Financial Aid Applications. For further details, see section on Applications.

14. Complete Parents' Confidential Statement. Most colleges require this for students seeking financial aid.
    Sample application, see page 10
    Where to order application, see page

15. Keep a record of applications and forms. Make carbon copies or write dummy copies of forms you send back.

COLLEGE ENTRANCE EXAMS

It is very important that you take all the college aptitude tests that are given in your high school. These tests can be difficult, so it's a good idea to learn as much about them as possible before they are given. Many books and guides are available that will help you prepare for college entrance exams. Your school library should have some of these, and the librarian will probably order others if you ask her.

Two of the tests you will hear about are:

1. The American College Test Program (ACT). ACT is divided into four parts: English math, social studies and natural sciences.

2. College Entrance Exams.

    a. Scholastic Aptitude Test (SAT). This test is made up of questions on English language ability and mathematics.

    b. Achievement Tests. These are given in six areas: English, foreign language, history, social studies, math and sciences. You should take up to three of these, and you should take them in the subjects you know best. Find out how many tests the colleges you are applying to want, before deciding how many achievement tests you will take.

On every college entrance exam there are very easy and very hard questions. Don't let this upset you because no one is expected to get all the answers right. Work as fast as you can without being careless. If you do not know an answer, don't give up, but go on to the next question. If there is time when you have finished that section, you can always come back to the questions you skipped in that section. Do as well as you can. You will be surprised how much you really do know and how well you can think out answers to hard questions.

The ACT and SAT exams are usually taken in your senior year. It is very wise for you to take the Preliminary Scholastic Aptitude Test (PSAT) in your sophomore or junior year. It is also wise to take the SAT in your junior year for practice. Your high school guidance counselor or principal can help you evaluate the meaning of your scores on these tests. Even if you are not now planning on college after graduation, it is still a good idea to take at least one of the college entrance tests.

These tests are given at regularly scheduled times throughout the year. Be sure to check with your high school teachers or guidance counselor about the exact time they will be given.

For further information and sample questions of these tests, write for special bulletins prepared by the College Entrance Examination Board.

COLLEGE ADMISSIONS APPLICATIONS

When you write for your college catalogue you will also want to get the college's application forms. All these will be sent to you free.

Begin early and always apply to more than one college. It's a good idea to apply to at least three. You can always turn down a school's offer if accepted at more than one.

On the next page is a typical college application form. If you want to apply for financial aid, you must fill out a separate form. This is explained later in this section.

Admission applications are long and detailed, so it's a good idea to practice filling it out on a scratch piece of paper first. Avoid making mistakes and always be sure to follow directions.

Many applications ask you questions about yourself like: What did you do this summer? or What are your special interests? These questions are used to see how well you can write, what your particular hobbies are, and how you use your spare time. When you answer these types of questions, don't be modest. Put yourself in the best possible light. Put down any honor, no matter how silly it may seem; but be serious, too. They aren't interested in seeing if you have a sense of humor.

Always think positive. If they ask if you are planning to be in college for four full years, say yes, even if you aren't sure now. Colleges like to have students with drive who'll stick out four years.

Most application forms require a copy of your high school grades. Your high school principal will take care of this.

THE HONOR SYSTEM

The University operates under a system of student self-government. Accordingly, every student carries the responsibility of citizenship in student life. This responsibility includes (1) the duty to respect and uphold the honor system (specifically, to refrain from cheating, stealing, and lying, and to report any violations); (2) the duty to respect and uphold the campus code (specifically, to observe standards of gentlemanly conduct at all times). Participation in a system of student government is a matter which the prospective student should consider seriously.

(1) Do you understand what is meant by student self-government and particularly the "Honor System" under which students are bound to uphold standards of honor and gentlemanly conduct? Yes (Yes or No).

If your reply to number one is "No" do not answer the next question. If your reply is "Yes," please give your considered answer to the following: (2) If you are admitted to the University, do you pledge to uphold student self-government and to cooperate whole-heartedly in making effective the honor system and the campus code? Yes (Yes or No).

SIGNATURE (As you usually sign your name) Calvin Watkins

Date November 18, 1965

FINANCIAL AID APPLICATIONS

There are not many families these days who can afford to pay for their children's college education out of income or a bank account. As a result, it may take three partners to put a student through college: the student himself, his parents, and the college.

As a student you should be expected to use any savings or any earnings you have from summer or part-time jobs. While in college, you may want to try to line up a campus job. Working ten or fifteen hours a week would allow you to add $200. to $400. a year toward your expenses.

Parents should be able to supply some money from their income or savings. Since you will no longer be living at home, there will be fewer food, high school, and recreational expenses. Money saved here could be directed toward putting the student through college.

The college can often provide considerable support. Some schools have "package" programs. The student is given a scholarship to cover a portion of his expenses, a low interest loan, and a campus job to cover much of the rest of the cost of college. This method allows the college to help a great percentage of its students.

To compete for these college scholarships, loans and jobs, it is necessary for the college to have some idea of your family's financial situation. Some colleges have separate financial aid application forms in addition to the regular admission form, but the majority of them use the Parents' Confidential Statement (PCS) prepared by the College Scholarship Service. You may find out which form the colleges of your choice use by checking in their catalogues.

Next to your personal qualifications, the most important item in applying for scholarship aid is your application. Except for those cases where an interview is necessary, the application is the only personal contact the college scholarship committee has with you. For this reason, most scholarship services look at your application as a direct reflection of your general character and ability. If an application is disorganized, dirty, or grammatically incorrect, a scholarship committee may think that these are your general characteristics. Misspelled words, unclear answers, and incomplete information are most often the things which hurt your chances in the eyes of a scholarship committee.

Most scholarship aid is given on the basis of grades as well as financial need. So it is very important that you give truthful information about your financial situation and academic standing. Expenses should not be "padded," but should be as realistic as possible. All scholarship committees have had enough experience in this area to spot quickly over-estimates of financial need. On the other hand, you should not under-estimate the amount you need, with the hope of having a better chance of getting aid by asking for a smaller amount. If financial need were the final factor in granting an award, the student who had the greatest need would be the one most likely to get it. As far as the academic record is concerned, all scholarship committees receive your grades from your school principal. It would be very embarrassing to find that the record which you reported is different from that sent by your principal.

Questions on most applications usually ask about such things as your parents' income and debts, your savings and expenses, and so forth. On the next page is printed a copy of the Parents' Confidential Statement (PCS), which has been filled out as a typical student might do it. We have used the PCS form since it is the most common one used. It asks the questions which will also appear on other financial aid application forms. PCS forms for your own use may be obtained from your counselor or the College Scholarship Service, Box 176, Princeton, New Jersey 08540.

HINTS ON FILLING OUT THE PCS FORM

This form is used by colleges to find out your financial need, so be sure to answer all parts fully. If you have any trouble, check with your counselor or favorite teacher; they can help you.

* Print all information. Use black ink. Blue ink or ball point pens won't work.

* Complete all items. If no information can be given for an item, write "none" in the space.

* Explain all circled-number items and unusual family situations. Use the space on page two of the form for this.

* Don't write in the gray areas.

When you get your PCS form you will also receive a booklet of instructions which will tell you how to complete all the items on this form.

Many colleges require having the PCS by January 15th, so fill it out and send it to them early. Don't get caught sending yours in late!

Note: There is a $3.00 fee for sending this form to the first college of your choice and a $2.00 fee for each additional college to get it.

Send in this form only if your family's income is $4,000 a year or more. If less than $4,000. use the Short Form shown just after this one.

College Admissions Centers

Because so many students now want to go to college, many high school graduates are having a hard time getting into the colleges of their first choice. The organizations listed below have been set up to help you get into college. These centers will give you all kinds of information on colleges that have space for you and on colleges best suited for your ability and talents. Remember, these centers do not guarantee admission to college, they only help direct you in your choice of colleges.

College Admissions Center, 610 Church Street, Evanston, Illinois, 60201. A student can get an application from the Center and send it back completed with his grades, test scores, and interests. The Center sends this form to several colleges with room left for students. Admission chances are good for these colleges, because they are picked in accordance with the student's interest and abilities. This service is very good particularly for students who would not make it into the nation's top colleges and for the student who for some reason applies to college late. Applications sent as late as July, or even August, still have some chance of acceptance. The service costs $15. If a student's guidance counselor certifies that the student is unable to pay this fee, he may receive the service Free.

College Admissions Assistance Center, 41 East 65th Street, New York, New York 10021. Offers a similar clearing-house service. For information and a registration form, send a stamped self-addressed business sized envelope. Also send $10 along with the completed application to be referred to suitable colleges.

Catholic College Admissions and Information Center, 3805 McKinley Street, N. W., Washington, D. C. 20015. A similar service: refers students to Catholic colleges. The student need not be Catholic to use this service which costs $15.

National Scholarship Service and Fund for Negro Students (NSSFNS), 6 East 82nd Street, New York, New York 10028. NSSFNS, in cooperation with guidance counselors, helps students find suitable integrated colleges and get applications in for scholarships. Their success in this service depends largely on your scores on PSAT or the National Merit exam. These scores must be sent to NSSFNS with your application before March 15th of your junior year (if you take the tests early) or November 15th of your senior year. Some students can get small scholarships from NSSFNS. Write early - early in your junior year is best - and ask for NSSFNS's booklet "Do You Want to Go to College?" which gives full information on the NSSFNS program.

The Parents' Confidential Statement forms which appear on these pages are reproduced with permission from the 1967-68 edition of the form, published by the College Entrance Examination Board, New York. This form is revised annually by the College Scholarship Service, an activity of the College Entrance Examination Board, and is supplied without cost to high schools for distribution to students who have been advised by colleges or scholarship sponsors to submit the Parents' Confidential Statement. The form may also be obtained on request by writing to College Scholarship Service, Box 176, Princeton, New Jersey 08540.

KEY COLLEGE TERMS

GENERAL TERMS

a) College

An institution of higher learning which accepts students who have finished high school with an adequate record, and who wish to have further education. Colleges grant a bachelor's degree (Bachelor of Arts and Bachelor of Science are the most common ones) usually after four years of study.

b) Junior Colleges

A junior college usually offers the same kind of program of study as the first two years of a regular college. When you graduate from a junior college you can transfer to a regular college. Junior colleges are often easier to get into than the four year college. Making a good record in a junior college can make it much easier for you to get into a four year college for the last two years.

c) University

A university is usually much larger than a college because it gives both undergraduate (bachelor's) degrees and graduate degrees. A university is usually divided into these general areas of study:

Humanities
for instance: foreign languages, English, philosophy, literature.
Social Studies
for instance: sociology, economics, psychology, history.
Natural Sciences
for instance: physics, chemistry, and possibly mathematics.
Biological Sciences
for instance: zoology and botany.
Fine Arts
for instance: music, art, drama.
Professional Schools
for instance: law, dentistry, social work, public health, business, journalism and sometimes theology.
Technical Schools
usually a separate institution, but many universities have divisions of engineering and agriculture.
Education
for training teachers.

d) Campus

The grounds on which the classrooms, dormitories, and other buildings of a college are located.

e) College Catalogues

Every college or university prints a book of information about itself. The information includes courses offered, what it takes to get into college, the cost of taking courses, and of staying in the dormitory. Information on scholarships and other financial aid is included. The catalogue sometimes gives a history of the college and lists the members of the faculty and administration.

f) Undergraduate Student

A student in college who has not yet graduated.

g) Graduate Student

A student who has already graduated from a college or university and who is now taking more specialized and advanced courses called graduate courses.

DIVISIONS OF A SCHOOL (OR ACADEMIC) YEAR

a) Semester

Some schools officially divide the main school year into two parts. Each part is called a semester and the school year consists of a fall semester and spring semester. A semester is sometimes called a term.

b) Quarter

Some schools divide the school year into four parts called quarters. There is one quarter for each season. Fall, winter, and spring quarters make of the main part of the school year, while summer school is the fourth quarter. If a school year is divided into three parts: winter, spring and summer, each part is called a trimester.

c) Summer School

Colleges usually offer courses in summer. Summer courses, equivalent to semester or quarter courses, are taught in a shorter length of time (six or ten weeks) and usually require more intensive study.

UNIVERSITY OR COLLEGE ADMINISTRATIVE OFFICIALS

a) Dean

The official who is in charge of a specific area of college life or work. He may be in charge of all the operations of a branch of the college (Dean of Arts & Sciences, Dean of the Graduate School) or he may be responsible for overseeing the student body (dean of men, dean of women).

b) Director of Admissions (sometimes called Registrar)

The director of all admission procedures. He is responsible for admitting or rejecting all the students who may apply to the college.

c) Bursar

The cashier of a college. He is responsible for collecting all tuition fees and charges for attending the college.

FEES

NOTE; Payment of tuition and fees is often called matriculation.

a) Tuition Fee

The money that you have to pay a college for the privilege of taking courses there.

Most state supported colleges and universities charge two kinds of tuition fees: In-State Tuition and Out-of-State Tuition. In-state tuition is fee paid by a student whose home is in the same state in which the college is located. These fees are simply reduced rates of tuition and associated fees. The in-state student pays less than the out-of-state student because the state government helps pay for in-state students with tax money.

b) Admission Fee

The money (usually around $10) you pay to a college to review your application for admission. This money takes care of all the office work (clerical work) necessary to process your application.

c) Acceptance Deposit

The money (from $25 to $100) that a college asks you to pay in advance of your attending college in order to show the good faith that you will attend the school when the term begins. This money is credited to your other bills when you arrive at the school.

d) Registration Fee

The money (usually around $5) you pay to a college for all the registration procedures it must go through in order to register you in the courses you wish to take.

e) Student Activities Fee

The money given to the student body to support many student sponsored activities such as athletics, school newspaper, social entertainment, and student government.

f) Health Fee

The money given to the Student Health Service which acts as an insurance agency to pay for hospital bills should you become sick at school.

g) Board Fee

The money you pay for all the meals given in the student cafeteria. Those schools which ask you for board have "meal tickets" which are given to you so that you may get food at the college cafeteria. Other schools let you buy food (or board) on your own.

h) Lab Fee

The money you pay as a breakage deposit for taking a course in which there is a required laboratory period. This money helps to maintain and replace worn laboratory equipment. Part of the lab fee may be returned to you at the end of the course.

FINANCIAL AID TERMS

a) Transcripts

A complete record of courses taken and grades made by a student at a particular school or college. In order to be acceptable, [illegible] transcripts must be sent in by a school official. High school transcripts are usually accompanied by an evaluation sheet which rates your personality and potential. Transcripts may be used to determine if your grades are good enough for admission to college or for financial help by the college.

b) Scholarships

A sum of money given by a college or a foundation to a student, usually - but not always - on the basis of his superior academic achievement or performance. It is given to a student in order to pay some or all of the expenses of attending college. Some academic scholarships are given over a period of four years and require that a student maintain a good average (usually a "B" or "C") in order to keep the scholarship each year. A few scholarships are not related to grades, but are given on the basis of excellence in other areas such as athletics, music, art, science, or even personality qualities.

c) Grants-in-Aid

A sum of money given to a student usually by a college which is granted strictly on the basis of the student's financial need. Like a scholarship, this money is used to pay for some or all of the college expenses. Most grants-in-aid do not stress exceptional grades; a student who receives this aid is expected to do average or passing work.

d) Loans

A sum of money granted to a student for his college expenses, which is to be repaid to the organization or agency from which it was borrowed. Most loans do not require repayment until after the student has graduated from college and has had time to find a job. A 3% to 6% interest charge is usually added to the principal amount borrowed, and both principal and interest are repaid in monthly installments.

e) Federal Work-Study Grants

These are grants made by the Federal Government to various colleges and universities to provide work for needy students. The school must employ students in job positions on the campus so that they may earn money needed for college expenses. The school usually matches at $1 for every $9 the amount of money given by the Federal Government, and this additional money benefits the student with higher wages. Special full-time summer jobs are also set up by the school under this program so that needy students may earn college money during the summer months.

f) Campus Employment

Colleges and universities hire students and non-students to work on the campus grounds and in the departments. Students may be hired to work in dining halls, in the library, in departments to do typing, general office work, take class roll, or be a lab assistant for a professor. As long as the job is located on the campus it is considered campus employment. This employment for students is usually part time and is used to help pay expenses. Some schools help the student arrange off-campus part-time employment.

DEGREES

a) Bachelor's Degree

A certificate showing that you have graduated from college. To get one you must take a basic pattern of courses designed to give you a depth of knowledge in a particular area of study. Bachelor's degrees are called Bachelor of Arts Degree (if you study such things as English, history, philosophy, etc.) or Bachelor of Science Degree (if you study such things as chemistry, math, or or biology).

b) Master's Degree and PH.D. Degree

These are the two most important advanced degrees. They require work on the graduate level at a university. These degrees require several years of additional, specialized work, comprehensive oral exams, and research papers. These degrees do not concern the beginning college student.

TERMS USED TO DESCRIBE DEGREE REQUIREMENTS

a) Semester Hours

All college classes are held a certain number of hours per week. A class which meets three hours per week for a semester is a course with three semester hours of credit toward graduation, in more common terms a three semester hour course. Sometimes a course may require a laboratory period of two or three hours per week. This would give extra hours credit toward graduation.

b) Credit

When a student completes a course, the number of hours he receives for that course is called credits. If the course was a three-hour course, then the student will get three hours credit added to the total number of credits completed for his degree.

c) Course Load

Colleges have established what they think is a normal number of courses a student must take. This is usually four to five courses a semester, term or quarter, depending on the college. You carry a normal course load if you take the required number of courses. But if you also have physical education and laboratory work or take an extra course, you are considered to have a "heavy" course load. When there is good reason for it, you might be allowed to take a slightly reduced course load.

d) Advanced Standing

Colleges will test you before the start of school. You will be tested for many of the areas that require study, such as English, math and foreign language. If you do very well on any of these tests you will not have to take some of the required courses in your first two years. You will automatically receive credits but no grades for the courses that you are placed out of. With advanced standing you will be able to take more elective courses or to graduate earlier.

e) Required Courses

All colleges and universities require that a student complete certain standard courses before he is given a degree. These required courses are in the field of foreign language, English, science, history, and often math. Colleges require that all of their students take these courses so that they will have at least some knowledge in all of these areas. The student usually gets the required courses out of the way in the first two years of college and then specializes in one area of study in the last two years.

f) Electives
Non-required courses which a student may choose to take. A certain number of electives are taken in order to fill the required number of courses necessary for a degree. Electives are usually chosen because they interest a student.

g) Major
Usually after your first two years of college you will be asked to pick an area of interest and to take extra courses in this area. This area of interest is called your major. If you are interested in history, for example, you would choose this as your major. This would mean that you might have as many as six courses in history during your last two years in college. It is possible to take extra courses and get a major in two subjects.

h) Minor
Some colleges require a student to pick a second area of interest. This area of interest is called your minor. It is different from your major in that you don't have to take as many courses in this area - usually about four in the last two years. Minors are more common in graduate school.

National Scholarships

Key To Scholarships

Below is a listing of National Scholarships. These grants are made to students residing anywhere in the United States and are available to you upon graduation from high school or available to you later during your college career. Each scholarship has been carefully studied, condensed and keyed according to a form which is standard throughout this guide. The key is as follows:

0. THE NAME OF THE SCHOLARSHIP
Eligibility: This heading will tell you if high school students or college students are considered for the scholarship. Where Valid: Some scholarships are to be used at specific colleges and universities. If the scholarship is limited to a particular college or university, note the number just before the Name of the Scholarship (in this case 0.), then consult the Guide to Colleges at the back of this guide. This scholarship will be valid at every college or university with the number 0 beside it. Restrictions: Some scholarships limit themselves to students of a particular sex, a particular interest, or the like. Some scholarships are specifically limited to Negroes. Other than in this case, all scholarships are awarded regardless of the applicant's race. Those scholarships which are available only to residents of a particular state are listed in a separate section. The word "None" indicates that there are no known restrictions. Value: Where possible, we try to give the exact number and the value of the scholarship offered. How to Apply: If the scholarship interests you, and you desire application blanks, you should write to the address listed under this heading. Basis of Award: Under this heading, we have tried to list the various criteria used in the selection of applicants. Scholarship and need are the two most common ones, although extracurricular activities, character, and service are often considered too. Deadline: Many scholarships require that applications reach the central office before a certain date. Where possible, we have listed this date. Almost all dates are based upon an intended entry into college in the fall semester. When the word "Unspecified" appears here, it would be wise to have your applications in by March 1, at the latest.

Guide To Colleges

The Guide to Colleges is divided into two sections.

The first section, "Some Recommended Colleges and Universities," is a representative listing of American colleges and universities which are located predominantly outside of the South. These schools represent only a small number of the good colleges in this country. They have been selected because they indicated an interest in recruiting Negro students, or because they have special programs to help disadvantaged students. Some of these schools have very high admission standards, while others have average admission standards. This list can serve as a good starting point in your search for a school that will match your interests and abilities. The mailing address and other pertinent information has been included to help you in finding out more about these colleges.

The second section, "Index of Colleges," is a listing of the colleges and universities which have financial aid programs listed in this booklet. Any college or university that has been listed in the first section has not been duplicated in this section. The listing may serve as a financial aid reference source for any of the schools listed. Remember that this listing is not complete - there are many other schools and many other types of financial aid available which have not been mentioned. The list is, however, another starting point in choosing the right college.

(NOTE: In listing Southern colleges and universities, no segregated institutions have been included. A complete list of all American colleges and universities, along with junior colleges, may be found in G. R. Hawes' The New American Guide to Colleges, The New American Library, Inc., 1301 Avenue of the Americas, New York, N. Y. 10019. Price 95¢.)
